Annual Alumni Achievement Awards Presented

Henry David Thoreau once said, "Be not simply good, be good for something."

The six winners of the 2007 Alumni Achievement Awards all demonstrated that they have been good for their professions and communities. Their success, along with the success of 80,000 other Wright State alumni in four decades, has helped the university build a reputation for excellence that extends throughout the Miami Valley and far beyond.

The winners were recognized during the Annual Alumni Achievement Awards Ceremony in the Creative Arts Center. Following a champagne reception and the awards presentation, guests enjoyed the WSU Theatre performance of AIDA.

Profiles of the award winners follow:

Anthony Whitmore

African American Society Award of Excellence

Anthony B. Whitmore, '80 M.Ed.

Anthony Whitmore's favorite memory as a Wright State student was spending time at the Bolinga Black Cultural Resources Center, where he shared cultural experiences and learned about issues affecting everyone.

His extensive community involvement continued after leaving Wright State. He helped to found the WSU African American Alumni Society and served as the first president. Whitmore's leadership gave the society a strong foundation that will serve it well into the future.

Whitmore has given back to the community in many ways. He served as a moderator for the Montgomery County Youth Collaborative's Teen Hip-Hop Summit. The event had teens talking about violence, drugs, gangs and health issues. Workshops, dialogue sessions and a college and health fair completed the daylong event.

Whitmore has compiled an impressive history of administrative, international relations and multicultural affairs experience. His extensive background also includes experience as a business and educational consultant, educator, motivational speaker, entrepreneur, college instructor and talk show host. Whitmore is presently director of government and community relations for the Greater Dayton Regional Transit Authority (RTA).

The African American Alumni Society Award of Excellence is presented to alumni who have furthered the society's mission to develop, plan, implement and promote diverse activities in order to support the continued success of Wright State's African American alumni, students, faculty and staff.

Robert Sweeney

Volunteer Service Award

Robert J. Sweeney, '77 B.S., '79 M.B.A.

Robert Sweeney has served Wright State University and the community as a faculty member, administrator and as executive vice president for planning and secretary to the Board of Trustees. Volunteerism is a big part of his life.

Sweeney has volunteered with the Association of Retarded Citizens Board for Community Mainstreaming, Hospice of Dayton and of Miami County, the Dayton YMCA, Dayton Urban League, and the Boys and Girls Clubs of Dayton. At WSU, he has volunteered his time and talent to facilitate strategic planning for numerous departments and colleges. Sweeney led the Alumni Association through a six-month process to develop its strategic plan.

A professor in the Department of Finance and Financial Services in the Raj Soin College of Business, Sweeney was also director of the Kettering Center for Continuing Education and special assistant to the provost for strategic planning. He chairs Wright State's Community and Civic Engagement Task Force.

Sweeney pioneered courses at Wright State that included quality topics and team teaching. He was the founding faculty member of a program allowing students to invest university funds in the stock market.

The Volunteer Service Award is presented to alumni who donate their time and talent to the development of the Wright State Alumni Association and are dedicated to making a difference in their communities.

Bonnie G. Langdon

Distinguished Alumni Achievement Award
Bonnie G. Langdon, '77 B.A., '79 M.A.

As a nursing home administrator, educator, business leader and community volunteer, Bonnie Langdon has accomplished much and distinguished herself by displaying the highest standards of professionalism while giving back to others.

Former President and CEO of the Maria-Joseph Living Care Center, Langdon is a licensed nursing home administrator and an assistant clinical professor in the Boonshoft School of Medicine's Department of Community Health.

Appointed to the Wright State University Board of Trustees in 2000, Langdon served as the board's chair from 2004 to 2006. As a University Trustee, Langdon has helped shape Wright State's future and contributed to the continued success of her alma mater in many ways.

In the community, Langdon chaired the Montgomery County Human Services Levy Campaign, the Capital Campaign Committee of the Miami Valley Economic Development Coalition and the Board of Governors of Leadership Dayton. She is also the founding president of the Ohio Gerontology Society and was the first woman to chair the Dayton Area Chamber of Commerce.

The Distinguished Alumni Achievement Award is presented to Wright State graduates who have achieved success in their chosen career while making a positive impact at the local, state, national or international level. The standards of integrity and professionalism exhibited have earned them the respect of colleagues, associates and the university community.

Jennifer Horn-Claypool

Athletics Alumni Award of Excellence

Jennifer Horn-Claypool, '86 B.S.Ed.

Jennifer Horn-Claypool has distinguished herself as an athlete and an educator. While at Wright State, Horn-Claypool was a four-year letter winner for the Lady Raiders from 1982 to 1986. She was named Third Team All-American and earned the WSU Alumni Award for Outstanding Female Athlete in 1985. She was inducted into the Wright State Athletic Hall of Fame in 1996 and the Basketball Wall of Fame in 2004. The Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame named Horn-Claypool to the Girls Basketball Silver Anniversary Team.

After graduating Wright State, Horn-Claypool earned a master's degree in school guidance counseling from Xavier University. She began her teaching career at Oak Hills High School and has held administrative positions at Princeton High School and the Batavia Local School District before becoming superintendent of Miami Valley Academies.

Horn-Claypool was named Teacher of the Year in Technology for the State of Ohio and received the 2004 Clermont County 20/20 "Salute to Leaders" Education Award. She has been an adjunct instructor for the University of Cincinnati's Raymond Walters College, Cincinnati State University and been an independent educational consultant.

The Athletics Alumni Award of Excellence is presented to alumni who bring recognition to Wright State athletics through outstanding performance as a student athlete and who go on to attain a significant level of achievement in their chosen career.

Shawn and Amy Howerton

Recent Graduate Awards

Amy Straiko-Howerton, '02 M.D.

Shawn M. Howerton, '02 M.D.

Shawn Howerton and Amy Straiko-Howerton have distinguished themselves by their strong commitment to providing compassionate family medicine and by making a significant difference in their community, Roseboro, N.C., where the husband-and-wife team are the only doctors.

Upon the completion of their residencies, the Howertons opened their own private practice in September 2005. They wanted to work and live in a rural town where they could practice the full scope of family medicine.

When they first arrived, the Howertons saw a need for, and hosted, a health fair promoting preventive medicine issues such as cholesterol checks, diabetes and blood pressure screening and car seat safety checks. They are both on staff at the Sampson Regional Medical Center in Clinton, N.C.

Despite the difficulties of residency training, the Howertons served as volunteer team physicians with Columbus Public Schools and for the Columbus Health Department Free Clinic. They also volunteered with Recreation Unlimited, a camp for kids with MR/DD.

The Recent Graduate Award recognizes the accomplishments of Wright State alumni who have graduated within the past 10 years. These alumni have quickly excelled in the various aspects of life after college by demonstrating outstanding accomplishments in their professional career; impressive volunteer service; and/or noteworthy involvement in professional and service organizations.

Our Newest Alumni

It's been 40 years since students, faculty and staff at the new Wright State University planted a tree to commemorate the university's founding. Forty years and 80,000 alumni later, the university celebrated the class of 2007 and four decades of making a difference in people's lives during the 40th semiannual commencement ceremony.

David R. Hopkins, Wright State's president since February, presided over his first commencement. He and many others in the past 40 years have embraced the spirit of community that surrounds the students, faculty, staff, alumni and retirees of Wright State.

"The community that came together 40 years ago with a single-minded intention to develop an institution of higher learning for its populace is the heart of the community we serve today," Hopkins says. "From there our impact radiates throughout the region, the state and the world."

Wright State alumni are everywhere making a difference in their professions, their communities and in the lives of others. They are doctors, nurses, teachers, scientists, accountants, engineers, lawyers, actors and filmmakers. They are in boardrooms and leadership positions throughout the Miami Valley and around the world.

Among those leaders is David Albright, a Wright State graduate, physicist and president of the Institute for Science and International Security (ISIS). Albright received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree during the spring commencement. Recognized around the world as an authority on secret nuclear weapons programs, Albright was honored for his many years of service to the people and governments of many nations.

Albright was not the only great role model among the 2007 graduates. Here's a sample:

Jasmine Malik, a single mother of twins at age 15, struggled to juggle work, college and parenting. Her six-year-old sons watched as she proudly walked up to receive her diploma.

Julie Barhorst earned an associate's degree before she graduated from high school. Now, at the age of 20, she's earned a bachelor's degree. The average age of this year's graduating class is 27.

Nancy Buckheister spent the last five years studying toward a bachelor's degree in social work while working as an administrative specialist in the African and African American Studies program and the Bolinga Black Cultural Resources Center and battling cancer. "Education is key to any change," she says.

Fifteen years ago, Edel Jesse, her daughter Pamela Allen and the rest of their family came to the United States from Dublin, Ireland, to pursue the American dream. They earned a unique piece of that dream when they graduated together.

Ethel Samuels, 70, shared her love of learning with her 27-year-old grandson, Gregory Hamilton, and graduated alongside him.

The time that Denise Schaefer spent in the neonatal unit with her triplets inspired her to return to school and earn a bachelor's degree in nursing. Pregnant with her fourth child, Schaefer kept at her studies and took night classes. Now that she has graduated, Schaefer will have much more time to spend with her family since she has accepted a weekend position as a certified R.N. in the Emergency Room at Children's Medical Center.

Hailing from South Africa, Vinothee (Verne) Fortson is the first in four generations of women and men in her family to graduate from high school and college and obtain a master's degree.

After serving in Operation Iraqi Freedom soon after his freshman year at Wright State, James Borchers gained a real understanding of the world and appreciated coming back to college.

Institute Presenters

Tom Flick

As president of Tom Flick Communications and Outlook Consulting Group, Tom understands that people, not programs, help organizations change and grow. He communicates his passion for raising employee morale, improving customer service, increasing teamwork and communication, managing change and developing more effective leaders with humor, wit and razor-sharp insight.

Michael Bridges ('81 B.S.)

Michael has a successful 27-year track record in the information technology (IT), systems engineering, and scientific fields. As founder and president of Peerless Technologies Corporation, he has positioned his company to meet the growing and evolving need within the defense technology market for enterprise solutions. Michael's creative leadership has been a key to success. Peerless was the first Ohio company to win a Small Business Innovative Research contract with the Department of Homeland Security.

Institute Presenters

Yolanda Bruce Brooks ('89 Psy.D.)

Yolanda has a lengthy history as a professional development and clinical consultant to corporate and sports executives, NFL, NBA and amateur athletes, their families and many organizations. She designs and implements programs addressing workplace and lifestyle issues while educating, training and guiding individuals toward healthier attitudes and behaviors.

David Gasper ('78 B.S.B.)

David has been very active in promoting entrepreneurship in the Dayton area. He has served as president of a private placement venture capital fund; been a member of the State of Ohio's Third Frontier Advisory Board; an executive in residence for the Raj Soin College of Business; and former chair of the CEO Development Program sponsored by the Dayton Area Chamber of Commerce. He founded Gasper Corporation, now an independent subsidiary of NCR, which uses automation to remotely manage ATMs and their support systems.

Christina Howard ('74 B.A., '80 M.S.)

As vice president of entrepreneurial development for the Dayton Development Coalition, Christina's duties include management of the Miami Valley Venture Funds and the Dayton Investment Network. She is currently focused on the implementation of the Dayton region's newest entrepreneurial effort, the $22.5 million Entrepreneurial Signature Program, which supports emerging technology companies through grants, equity investments and entrepreneurial assistance programs.

Deborah A. Loewer ('76 B.S.)

Rear Admiral Loewer, USN (Ret.), is vice president of homeland security for Advanced Acoustic Concepts (AAC). She has over 20 years of national security experience, providing security briefings and direct crisis management support to the President, the Secretary of Defense and the National Security Advisor. At AAC, she leads teams of systems and software engineers in the requirements analysis, design, development and deployment of solutions for homeland defense and homeland security.

A New Tradition

On June 6, in the final busy days before the spring commencement, the Alumni Association hosted the first-ever graduate send-off for the Class of 2007. On a beautiful spring evening, graduates and Alumni Association board members gathered near Alumni Tower for a cookout, the chance to get acquainted and celebrate a new phase in their lives.

The event celebrated the symbolic transition from Wright State University students to Wright State University alumni. To the strains of the WSU Alma Mater, the new graduates walked under the tower, where they were greeted by WSUAA President Tom Koogler and board members Bruce Kline, Neal Pemberton, Carolyn Wright and Gary LeRoy.

"We hope this will be the start of a long, long tradition here at Wright State," said Susan Smith, executive director of the Office of Alumni Relations.

"We're going to memorialize this and donate one of the stones with your name and the year of your graduation in the plaza so you'll be able to come back in the future and see it," Koogler told the new graduates. Alumni Association membership is a great opportunity, he added.

"We have enjoyed it and hope that you will enjoy it with us," Koogler said. "Best of luck in the future from all of us."

"You're out of Wright State now and you're going forward into the world to make your mark," said President David R. Hopkins to the gathering. "You're also transitioning into our Alumni Association. You are joining 80,000 graduates of Wright State University—40,000 of those graduates still reside in the Miami Valley."

Alumni Association membership, now free to alumni for the first year after graduation, "is a tremendous opportunity to network and really get engaged with some of these alumni who have preceded you here at Wright State," said Hopkins. "We're extremely proud of you and I want you to know that being part of the Alumni Association will open opportunities for you that you've never had before."

▲ The WSU Alumni Association held a send-off picnic for graduating students in the class of 2007 and welcomed them as new alumni.

► All 2007 graduates were invited to take the Alumni Tower tradition walk as they passed from being students to alumni.

▲ President David R. Hopkins joined the Alumni Association to congratulate members of the class of 2007.

"...being part of the Alumni Association will open opportunities for you that you've never had before."
